OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 20, 1866.

On the whole the Senate did a wise thing to postpone the tariff bill till next winter. Nearly all the prominent Republican journals acquiesce in the action of the Senate without growling. Even the Tribune, which was one of the most earnest advocates of the bill, makes very little ado over the postponement. The fact is, that it was a bill that could not satisfy a large class of Republicans, and it was unwise to precipitate it upon the canvass this fall.

Since my last letter, there has been a Cabinet smash-up and not a little excitement over it. It was caused by the President's course. Within two or three weeks he has shown a firmer purpose to betray the Republican party than ever before. Thinking that Congress was on the eve of adjournment, he began his preparations for a vigorous campaign, and as his only hope of success comes from a low view of human nature his first thing was to begin to make removals from office. The next thing was to insist that all his office-holders should back up the Philadelphia Convention—should join him in trying to destroy the Republican party and building up a new one, composed of Copperheads, rebels and office-hungry Republicans. He began to talk of his new party (and of course talk does the old one) in Cabinet meetings, and it was very soon distinctly intimated to Mr. Dennison that he was expected to go heartily into the new movement—that he was to try out all genuine Republicans and then turn them out of office and put in their places Copperheads and trading Republicans. Mr. Dennison would not agree to do this dirty work, nor would he be the agent in accomplishing the vile schemes of the President. Hence his resignation. He showed that he was a nobleman and not a huckster. Welles, of the Navy Department is a trader, mean by instinct, and wholly without principles as a politician. Dennison never did consort with such men as Welles.

Mr. Speed of Kentucky is a man of the same kind as Dennison—upright and manly, and earning more for honor than for high place. His manliness is the more conspicuous from the fact that he has no constituency to fall back upon as Dennison has. He gives up a prominent place in the Cabinet simply because he is an honorable man and will not consent to be a part of a gigantic piece of treachery. Those who remain long in the Cabinet will now be understood as taking sides with the President in the grand movement to build up a new party and crush the old one that carried the country through the war so safely and successfully. One would suppose that the Secretary of State would be ashamed of such work, but he is swallowed up in Thurlow Weed and that class of men. Whether he gentles them or they direct his course I cannot say, but they act together very closely and have no disagreements, apparently. Seward no doubt leads the President.

There was a very interesting passage in the Senate the other day, between Trumbull, of Illinois, (a sound Republican), and Hendricks, of Indiana, (strongly a Copperhead), upon the powers of Congress. I must give you the argument on one point:

Mr. Trumbull—Does the Senator confine the authority of Congress to decide whether a State has a Legislature loyal to the Union and with authority to be represented? That is the question.

Mr. Hendricks—That is not the question that the Senator puts. I would put it in this way: Will you refer to this State any man who could take a seat in this body, came with credentials competent authority. The Senate, under the Constitution of the United States, may decide whether he comes from competent authority. That is my question.

Mr. Trumbull—Then do I understand the Senator—and I want to keep him to the point; I am not talking about the Senate's authority to decide upon the qualifications, and rejection of its own members—I want to know of that Senator if he denies the authority of the loyal people of this nation, the Congress of the United States, not the Senate, but the Congress of the United States, to determine whether the body claiming to be competent to elect Senators is the legitimate authority of a State or not.

Mr. Hendricks—That is not the question which I decide, and to which the Senator is replying; but I will say this, that the Constitution of the United States having conferred upon the Senate the exclusive power of judging of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own members, I do not think Congress has any one of those questions, but for the Senate exclusively.

Mr. Trumbull—That is reasoning around a circle. The Senator repeats over the Constitution, which says the Senate of the United States has authority to determine upon the elections, returns, and qualifications of its members. We all know that. That is not the question. I put it to the Senator from Indiana whether the people of a rebel region of country, a country that would make seven or eight or ten States as large as Pennsylvania, after the rebellion has been fought out, as Tennessee, Missouri and Washington in truer Sound, and the insurrection would tend to the development of the agricultural and mineral resources of that country, and in an indirect way it would more than compensate the United States for all the debt it might expend in the construction of the road or bounties it might pay. If this bill should become a law, the Senate finally recommitted the bill, and it will probably lie in the Committee till next December.

Endless effort has been made within two or three days, to muster the courage of Congress up to the point of passing the veto. At one time it seemed as if it would succeed, but the dreadful heat (surpassing anything seen in Washington within 20 years) was too powerful an agent against it, and the Houses adjourned on an adjournment on the 25th instant. The President will, therefore, re-select his own Cabinet without interference on the part of Congress, and will ... if he chooses to do so. But in spite of his ... in the opinion of sagacious Republicans, he will be badly beaten in the elections. Everything depends upon the result. If he is beaten, it is very ... probable that there is no end of him, and the rebellious South will have to arrange with Congress, and not with the President, as to the terms of reconstruction.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE

SATURDAY MORNING AUGUST 25, 1866

The Union Convention at Philadelphia next month—Let Oregon be Represented

All the loyal States are moving in the matter of appointing delegates to the Convention of Southern Unionists which is to meet at Philadelphia on the 3d of next month The Union State Central Committee of California some days ago appointed a delegation of Union men, citizens of that State now at the East to attend this Convention on behalf of the Union party of California The Union State Central Committee of Oregon should, ere this, have conferred together for the purpose of appointing delegates from this State to the Convention to assure that body of the hearty sympathy and co operation of the Union party of Oregon It is not yet too late There is still time left for the Committee to telegraph to Oregon Unionists now at the East, requesting them to attend the Convention to represent the Union party of this State in that body The Convention is a movement with which the Unionists of Oregon fully sympathise Several of our citizens are now at the East who would be glad to attend if requested to do so We suggest the names of Senator Williams, H W Eddy and Chris Taylor, as gentlemen who would, no doubt, cheerfully attend There are many other citizens of Oregon, we doubt not, now at the East, who would be glad to accept the trust We hope the Committee will move in the matter at once. Let Oregon be represented in the loyal Convention!

Wool Manufacture in Oregon.

Oregon has just reason to be proud of the development of many branches of her industry, and in none of them has there been more rapid advancement than in the manufacture of woolen goods At present there are four mills in operation in the State, two of them being the largest on the Pacific coast. A somewhat detailed account of each of these mills, with a description of their capacity, operations, &c, will not be amiss at this time

The mill of the Willamette Woolen Manufacturing Company, located at Salem, is the oldest one in the State, and may therefore be entitled to first mention The main building is of wood, 200 feet in length by 54 feet in width, and three and a half stories high. There is also a storehouse 80 feet long and 30 feet wide, with other necessary buildings for carrying on the business. This mill runs four setts of carding machinery and 1,680 spindles; has 33 looms broad and narrow, employs 100 operatives and turns out 1,000 yards of cloth daily. It also produces a large quantity of yarn for the market, most of which is used by families in this State The quantity of wool worked up in the Salem mill is about 400,000 pounds per annum.

The mill at Oregon City is now making more cloth than any other in the State. It runs day and night, and at present employs 80 operatives The building is of brick, and is 190 feet long and 54 feet wide, with a wing 80 feet in length by 50 in width—the whole being three and a half stories high, and constructed in the most substantial manner. Three setts of cards are now in operation in the mill, with 980 spindles and 19 broad looms It is now manufacturing 1,200 yards of cloth daily Running with its present force, the mill would consume 300,000 pounds of wool per year Within a month from the time the machinery, however, is to be doubled, when 120 operatives will be employed in the mill, and the consumption of wool increased to 500,000 pounds per annum. When this mill is put to running at its full capacity it will be by far the most extensive and complete woolen manufacturing establishment on the Pacific coast.

The Eagle mill, at Brownsville, once unfortunately destroyed by fire, has been fully rebuilt, and in operation for some time. The building is a frame structure 120 feet long and 50 feet wide, with a wing 80 feet in length by 40 in width. It is two and a half stories high. A storehouse is attached which is 80 feet long and 40 feet wide The mill has two setts of carding machinery in operation, with 630 spindles and 14 looms It gives employment to 50 operatives, and manufactures 500 yards of cloth daily. The wool worked up at the Brownsville mill amounts to 150,000 pounds annually

The Eilendale mill near Dallas, Polk county, is the smallest of the four, but its operations are by no means insignificant. It has one set of cards, 400 spindles and ten looms, and employs 20 operatives It turns out 250 yards of cloth per day and consumes 80,000 pounds of wool annually. We have no information as to the dimensions of the building.

If these mills continue to run at their present rate throughout the year, they will work nearly 1,000,000 pounds wool into cloth, yarn, &c Running at their full capacity, they would consume considerably more On the basis of the figures given above, it appears that the quantity of cloth they would produce in a year would be fully 900,000 yards. The actual amount will probably be something less, as the mills will not run every day in the year.

The figures abundantly demonstrate the extent and importance of our woolen manufactures It is a showing, the equal of which, many State older and more populous than Oregon, might well be proud to make. It is a branch of industry, too, which is in its infancy among us, but which will yet be developed until Oregon will become one of the chief of our wool manufacturing States.

Other mills have been projected at various times in different parts of the State, but whether any of them will be built immediately, we do not know. The mill which was to have been erected at the Dalles this summer, it would, is not to be built, at least for the present. Southern Oregon has yet no woolen factory, though an enterprise for building one has been under consideration by parties in Jackson county for some time That part of the State needs a mill, and we hope to see the enterprise go on

Oregon is emphatically a wool-growing State. The fleeces grown here are of superior fineness, and sheep thrive well with little care or expense to the husbandman The market for goods is unfailing, and as there is no better way of adding to the permanent wealth of the State, we should see the number of sheep and the quantity of our manufactures doubled within the next three years

Besides the amount of wool purchased for our mills this season, about 500 000 pounds have been sold for shipment abroad. A considerable portion of this year's crop is still remaining in the hands of farmers

Every man who is the architect of his own fame, every maid of earnest convictions and sincerity of purpose, every man of self-respect and manly independence, every man who ever achieved honorable distinction, is, to adegree, an egotist —Herald.

"A Crown's worth of good interpretation" This explains why the outcast who edits the Herald is always lauding himself His description, however does not quite apply in all respects to his own case, for the fame of which he boasts he is the architect, is nothing but notoriety, what he calls "earnest convictions and sincerity of purpose," amounts to nothing more than malapertness and perversity of conduct, the "manly independence" he assumes is a counterfeit of the real quality, caused by the disinclination of other people to go in his company, and the "honorable distinction" he claims to have reached is a misnomer for the bad eminence to which his "merit" has raised him But notwithstanding these inaccuracies of definition, the sentence quoted above reveals the secret cause of the Johnsonian egotism of the individual who makes the Herald the vehicle of his self laudations.

FROM WASHINGTON TERRITORY

The following is from our regular correspondent at Olympia, under date of Aug 21st

Levi Farnsworth, Esq of Vancouver arrived to-day from Vancouver having passed over and viewed the Snoqualmie and Nachess Passes of the Cascades in accordance with an act passed by the last legislature Fifteen thousand dollars appropriated, $5 000 out of the Territorial Treasury to open and build a road through the first pass This road of the Nachess was first opened as a military road costing Government some $20,000 but owing to Indian troubles has been impassable until the past year when it was again opened by the citizens of Pierce and Thurston counties at a cost of $—,000 The citizens are again making an effort to clear it of fallen timber this winter at a cost of perhaps $300 The further appropriation of the Territory when applied will make it an excellent mountain road

Hon A A Denny Delegate arrived here by the stage this evening, and will leave for his home (Seattle) to-morrow morning.

A long, lean, cadaverous scraper of catgut, who came here with a concert company, and who has been found several times prowling about female bed rooms became sadly demoralized (like the soldier at Fredericksburg whose cowardly legs carried him out of battle) when he saw a critter with a small raw-hide coming in his direction last Saturday evening The scoundrel's name is Vanderhoef, and he deserves whipping round the world with that raw hide He left town immediately

It has been exceedingly hot for a few days past, though not as bad as the local papers would seem to make it. We have a shower to-night making it somewhat cooler

A Steilacom correspondent says that up to the starting of the mail on the 21st the robbers of Mr Locke the brewer had eluded all search They got off with about six or seven hundred dollars in silver and about one thousand in gold One thousand dollars in greenbacks, in the safe, was overlooked in their haste

FROM IDAHO.

The Idaho City Tri on of the 12th, has the following

AN INDIAN RAID AND ROBBERY.

A party of Indians made a raid on a hay ranch about eight miles from Miller's ranch on Burnt river On Monday evening last while the men were running the mowing machine about one mile from the house bringing out a flight of hay two, three Indians entered the house and helped themselves to about 12 pairs of blankets with all the ... in camp also carrying away the ... and six shot rifles. The improvement to carrying ... see the Indians going off over the mountains but they were powerless to capture them. The men unhitched their horses and started after the Indians but gave up the pursuit as hopeless. They did not overtake them. The redskins took all the blankets and grub to the amount of $300.

TEAM OF HORSES DROWNED

A man by the name of Davis, with a span of horses while attempting to ford the Payette river opposite Ridge's Ranch The ford was deeper than by the spring freshets so much that his team was washed down and drowned instantly

A heavy shower fell near Old's Ferry on the 9th cooling the atmosphere and laying the dust

We have the Boise Statesman of the 14th and 17th, from which we take the following:

ELECTION RETURNS.

We have returns from the following precincts of this county, (Ada) which gives the following majorities

Precincts	Kirkpatrick	Holbrook
Boise City		1
Union	26
Dry Creek	3
Indian Creek		1
Payette		30
Canyon		18
Middleton		30
Lower Boise		20
Weiser		20
Total majority for Holbrook		91

Shoshone precinct 11 majority for Kirkpatrick but the residents of that precinct chiefly live in Altona and have returned their poll books to that county

Holbrook's vote at Idaho City Boise county is 763, which is about the average vote on the county ticket Kirkpatrick had 446, Majority for Holbrook 317 which it is believed will be doubled by the returns from the other precincts in the county Gruther had at Idaho City 738, Gray, 491

Owyhee county returns nearly complete give Holbrook 150 majority Springer Republican candidate for Sheriff, is elected

CROPS—SCARCITY OF LABORERS

The farmers of Boise and Payette Valleys are now engaged in harvesting and threshing the most abundant crop ever raised in the Territory. One can easily perceive when they come to town that they wear a different air from that of one year ago. Notwithstanding the evident haste to get back to the farm, there is plainly visible an air of content and satisfaction that denotes a Thrift is gratifying. There is a scarcity of hands throughout the valley and wages are high as much so as to be quite an item at each Much grain is now dead ripe and hardly hands enough to save it

NEW MACHINERY COMING

Mr J H. Robie whose mill was burned a few days since, has already sent for a new set of planers, saws and other machines for dressing lumber, making finishing stuff, sash, doors and blinds, and will put them to running as soon as possible. His mill in the mountains keeps the yard supplied with lumber and he will in a few months have running ample machinery for working up lumber, as perfect as before the fire. This is commendable perseverance

MONEY RECOVERED

Geo Burbidge, we understand, followed Bloomer, who robbed Madame Roques a few days ago, and caught him at Salmon river and recovered about eighteen hundred dollars of the money and let Bloomer go

AN ADVANCE PARTY OF PROSPECTORS.

The advance of a party of over one hundred prospectors from Boise county arrived in town last night bound for Wind River The remainder of the party are expected to arrive to-day and all start towards Fort Hall, from whence they learn the road and go northeast to their destination.

DRY GOODS.

Meagher, Teaffe & Co., No 9 Lick House, Montgomery street, will ... get through selling their immense stock of dry goods, piled up in their retail store as above; so the ladies say And why? We say, because they replenish their stock every day, from their wholesale house on Battery street, and increase their Battery street house from the New York house That is why they can afford to sell goods so much cheaper than any other dry goods establishment in San Francisco Packages of goods sold are sent home for the purchasers the same day, by their porters, who are kept busy on the run Now ladies, you have the secret, why Meagher, Teaffe & Co sell so much and at such low prices

Evidence Implicating Jeff Davis in the Assassination of Lincoln

The New York Herald has been giving publicity to some of the evidence in possession of the War Department implicating Jeff. Davis in the assassination of President Lincoln. We copy the following affidavits from the Herald of July 20th

EVIDENCE OF JOHN PATTEN

Two of those deposition makers are men calling themselves John Patten and F B Wright. The former in his deposition, says that he is a native of Georgia and is well acquainted with Davis that during the war he was engaged in furnishing provisions and stores for the rebel army having been excused from military service on furnishing a substitute; that in the latter part of June 1865 an acquaintance of his named Lamar, also from the State of Georgia, informed him that he (Lamar) was about to enter upon an enterprise which, if successful, would immortalize and enrich all who engaged in it, and at the same time invited deponent to join him; that at deponent's request Lamar explained the nature of the enterprise which was to kidnap or kill Lincoln, that deponent then enquired what plan had been devised and whether the Government was cognizant of or had authorized the project, that Lamar replied that several high officers of the Government were aware of and applauded it, and that he was assured by General Winder that President Davis also approved it, that he (Lamar) was to have an interview with Davis on the following day, when he would present his plans and learn his (Davis') decision; that deponent promised to enter into the scheme if the President should sanction it, and on the next day accompanied Lamar and Winder to Davis' office; that Lamar submitted a written plan for kidnapping Lincoln, and for killing him if it should be found impossible to carry him off alive that Davis, after the reading of the plan, said he had never doubted that a small party of brave men could attack Lincoln in his stronghold and kill him and perhaps make him a prisoner and run him into the Confederate lines, but that he had felt, some doubts whether such a proceeding would be recognized by the civilized world as honorable warfare, and as the emergency had not in his judgment, arisen for resorting to such extreme measures, he had dismissed several similar propositions without serious consideration, but that recently the enemy had committed the most barbarous outrages; and shown an utter disregard for the laws of nations and the laws of war, and that he now felt not only justified in adopting the measure proposed but that he would prove recreant to his duty to reject any scheme, however harsh, calculated to lay the enemy at his feet or bring him to honorable terms of peace that he (Davis) further observed that since this subject was first mooted before him he had become fully convinced on mature study and reflection that the President of the United States being the Commander in Chief of the Army, it would be as proper and as fully in accordance with the laws of war to send a small party within the enemy's lines to capture or kill him as to do the same by any of his officers or soldiers, that he then complimented the plan submitted by Lamar, and expressed the opinion that if it were resolutely acted upon success would be certain, that reference was then made to the subject of money to carry out the plot, when Davis said he would arrange that matter with Gen Winder, who would furnish from time to time such sums as might be required; that deponent and Lamar then left, and on the afternoon of the same day they received a considerable sum of money from Winder, and entered on the desperate business, that they engaged a number of reliable men, who were to work themselves through the Federal lines and take quarters in Baltimore and Georgetown and wait until called upon for action, that several days after said interview with Davis one of the parties engaged with deponent and Lamar, named McCullough, was arrested on the charge of betraying the secret; that deponent and Lamar and another associate named Powell (supposed to be Payne, who was executed with Mrs Surratt) called at General Winder's office to learn the facts in the case, and were there informed that the General had gone to Davis' quarters in regard to McCullough's case, when deponent and his companions also repaired to Davis' office; that they found Winder there with the detectives who arrested McCullough, and that said detectives were in the act of explaining, to Davis the circumstances under which he made the arrest; that Davis then said to deponent and Lamar that it was to be regretted that they had mentioned his name to McCullough at all, and that he hoped they had confided in no more of the same character, that the blockade runners who had heard McCullough's boasts might be Yankee spies, as many of their class were, and that he feared the project might be communicated to the authorities at Washington and frustrated, that the utmost haste was to be used in putting the scheme into execution or failure would be certain, that a blow must be struck at once, that General Winder, who was in a rage over the conduct of McCullough, added: "Yes, you must strike at once, bring the d—d baboon here, dead or alive, as soon as possible, if you don't fetch his whole carcass bring him d—d scalp," that Davis, with a smile, interrupted Winder, observing, "Gentlemen, you will not forget the directions I have already given you" I prefer that you should, if possible, capture Lincoln and bring him within our lines without injuring a hair of his head, but if you find it impossible to capture him, it is your duty to destroy him if you can, reach him the same as you would any officer or soldier in his service, and if you succeed in making him a prisoner and find there is danger of his being recaptured, you will take care that he does not return to Washington alive, but that you again injure you to lose no time; it's knowledge of your intentions reach Washington, your labors will be in vain; and the surrender of Vicksburg to Grant, and the defeat of Lee in Pennsylvania, who is being driven back on our Capital, render it necessary, as perhaps the only means of saving the country, that the enterprise should be carried out at once, go on, and I expect you will be hailed as the saviors of the country, I receive unbounded praise, Patten & Co. (for those said that they were prepared to strike as soon as they could get North with the sub-party of Fort Clitty, who were already on the ground), that Davis replied, that they should require more money for operations when they should get to Washington, Davis replied, "Yes, that is all right, that the General (referring to Winder) would see to that," that on the morning Winder furnished the with a large sum of money, and deponent, Lamar, Powell and others started for Washington; that on arriving North they found that many of the men forwarded by them had been arrested and confined in the Old Capitol and other persons contemplating of being spies and that they were obliged to abandon the undertaking.

EVIDENCE OF F B WRIGHT

The witness, Wright, in his affidavit before the Bureau of Military Justice, deposed that he was a native of Nova Scotia, that in 1862 he went to the Confederacy, running the blockade into Wilmington, that for a time he was engaged in speculating in provisions and military stores, but that in the beginning of 1863 he was employed by General Winder, in Richmond, as detective; that in July 1863, the learned from Winder that there was a project on foot to kidnap Lincoln, if necessary, to kill President Lincoln; that one evening shortly after, while in a public house, he overheard a conversation relating to the plot, on entering found a man named McCullough, half intoxicated, uttering to some hill side runners that within a month the old rail splitter would be in Richmond pulling wool to keep the Yankee officers' rations at the Libby; that knowing McCullough was betraying a portion secret of the Government, he, as was his duty, arrested and confined him in Castle Thunder, that on the following day he was informed by General Winder that the President was exceedingly annoyed at the arrest of McCullough, and his father, a very wealthy and influential man, had interceded with the President in his behalf, and had represented that his son had been arrested maliciously and without cause, and that he (Winder) wished deponent to accompany him to Davis and explain precisely what he had McCullough's supposed and all the circumstances under which he had made the arrest, that thereupon deponent and Winder called upon Davis, when deponent, at his Excellency's request, made the desired explanation that while they were talking on the subject three men, named Patton Lamar and Powell, called in relation to the arrest of McCullough

The deposition than proceeds to recount what was said and occurred by and between Davis and the other parties referred to, and corroborates in almost the precise language the account given in Patten's affidavit of his second interview with the rebel chief

WEEKLY REVIEW

PORTLAND FRIDAY, 2 P M
August 24 1866

Our latest dates by mail are from San Francisco to the 16th and from New York to the 21st of July No particularly interesting intelligence pertaining to the commercial or financial world were received The Bulletin gives an official statement of the receipts and expenditures of the United States from July 1st 1865, to March 31st 1866, agreeable to warrants which shows total receipts and expenditures as follows

Receipts exclusive of Loans	$428 603,142 61
From Loans etc	520,466,393 00
Total Receipts	$949,169 535 60
Expenditures	$44 [illegible]
Total expenditures Public Debt	[illegible]
Total Expenditures	$815 [illegible]

An estimated statement of receipts and expenditures for the balance of the fiscal year ending June 30th is also given from which we [illegible] following

Total Receipts	$129 [illegible]
Total expenditures	$1 868 663 [illegible]

After waiting so long as the Bulletin we expected a more complete statement than either—one that was official and not estimated for the last quarter They do things differently in Great Britain the English fiscal year like ours, ends on June 30th On July 5th the accounts for the close of the fiscal year will state correctly the receipts of the Government for the year was laid before the British public In the meantime on the 20th of July before even the above partially correct statement was given to the people of both Departments at Washington Such a want of confidence in a paper or private corporation would be its utter ruin Here is the statement of the English revenue

The revenues of the English government for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1866, were £338 [illegible],130 as compared with $348 743,790 for the previous year, thus showing a decrease of over $10 000 000, raised by taxation from customs during the year ending June 30th the receipts were $166,844 000 from internal revenue $100 [illegible] 000 from sales of stamps $4 [illegible] 000 from real estate tax $23 585 000 from other direct taxes $14 [illegible] 000 from the Postoffice surplus $21 [illegible] 000 from the Crown lands, $1,006,000 and from other miscellaneous sources, $14,34 [illegible],130 The reduction of the English revenue for the fiscal year as compared with the previous one was mainly owing to the reduction of the income tax from 6d to 4d in the pound the loss from this reduction having been $5,000 000; and some changes in the customs so that many items in reality show an increase for the last fiscal year over the returns of the previous one The annual product of the 4d income tax is set down at about $25,856 000. The English revenue receipts for the last fiscal year as compared with our own estimated receipts for the same period, teach an instructive lesson The American revenues are estimated at $55,000 000 while those of England were $333,852,180 The young country has far outstripped the older one even in what was once their pride to be England's special prerogative—the right of raising large sums by taxation

Dr D J Macgowan, long a resident of China, and Commissioner of the East India Telegraph Company of invitation of the Board of Supervisors of San Francisco recently delivered an address before them upon various and important commercial topics On the subject of trade currents the address goes to show that were a chart constructed somewhat on the design of those calculated to indicate the course of winds and currents, delineating the changes that have taken place in the currents of the world's commerce, the various revolutions of trade might be seen at a glance, and their momentous results better appreciated We should then see that more changes were simultaneous with events which form epochs in human history that regions hitherto obscure, which were reached by those newly opened channels of traffic, soon attained importance, conferring on their inhabitants no small share in the government of the world That we are on the eve of witnessing one of those revolutions of of commerce, is obvious to all thoughtful observers.

The Doctor holds that we are solving the problem which impelled Columbus to his voyage of discovery We are not finding, but making a way to the Indies in the course of the setting sun. By means of our continental railroad and line of Pacific steamers we shall divert the commerce of Eastern Asia eastward to these shores, rendering the Pacific States and territories the feet of the globe, and enabling to make the greatest centre of trade upon this coast second to no city in the world. It has been, therefore, incumbent on those who have at heart the interests of the Pacific section of the Union to give special consideration to the nature of our relations with more ancient and populous communities, with whom impending changes are bringing us into close contact

Other equally interesting subjects are referred to Our lack of space will not admit of our quoting extensively from the address, but we give place to the following concerning our want of naval facilities, and new ports to be opened.

In view of the fact that the various mercantile nations of Europe have secured to themselves ports and territorial [illegible] in Eastern Asia, and that in the event of war with any of these powers, our entire commerce in those would be in constant jeopardy, it must be admitted that we have neglected to discharge in the most vital interests of the United States which merchantmen of [illegible] confederation Russia, England, Portugal, France, Spain and Holland each have naval stations, which secure for their mercantile marine a degree of protection which we, not less than they, may find desirable, particularly in reference to the future of the Sandwich Islands

Our interests in Eastern Asia, moreover, require that we should have commercial treaties with all the States in that part of the world which [illegible] are its ports With the empire of Annam, for example, (erroneously called Cochin China) we have no treaty; although long ago as when Mr Woodbury was Secretary of State, an envoy was commissioned to the Annamese Emperor to negotiate for commercial privileges That attempt to extend the field of American enterprise failed and a subsequent one, as did also repeated efforts on the part of England and France to effect the same object.

Recently, however, in the same manner that England acquired Hong Kong into the family of nations, and as the United States overturned, though in a gentler way, the feudal service of Japan, the allied forces of France and Spain have extorted treaties from Annam and as the resources of the world to China and Japan were opened by Britain and the United States so are the Princes Spanish with Annam has opened that empire to general mercantile intercourse We have now, therefore, only to assert ourselves at Hue in order to obtain access to one or more ports, which the French have suffered them to retain and I hold that American interests in Eastern Asia require that immediate steps shall be taken to secure for this country the same privileges which Annam has conceded to France and Spain

I am will to admit that there is not much in the history of [illegible] conditions of that empire to warrant expectations of great commercial advantage soon to accrue from having a port to its ports, but the need there is of additional neutral ports in more seas, is a sufficient reason for embracing this opportunity of extending our trans-Pacific relations Besides, it is certain that a trade would speedily develop itself with the populous and extensive empire, contributing on one hand to its elevation, and on the other to the wealth of the Pacific States. I would enjoin on you, therefore, the duty of calling the attention of the General Government to the importance of opening new channels of commerce in Eastern Asia.

The Springfield Republican publishes an elaborate article on the subject of the gold and cotton crops, in which it proves that the gold and silver mines of the United States will yield not half as many dollars this year as the cotton crop, to which Secretary McCulloch is looking for so much help in paying off the national debt. In speaking of the cotton crop it says:

The general prospects are good, the most hopeful and unbelieving rebels do not place the cotton crop below a million and a half of bales, and other judgments range from 2 bale to three million bales. It is quite within bounds, we think, to expect a crop of two million bales, or eight hundred million pounds The price is now 40c a pound Estimate it at 20c, at which rate it can command the English markets and we have two hundred million dollars from this source alone.

This sum is probably twice the year's product of gold and silver The most intelligent estimates place the yield in precious metals, of all our mining States and Territories, at one hundred millions. This will be at least one-third more than that of 1865 or any other year Last year's products are still stated at about seventy five millions.

Our own conviction is that these figures are too high; but to grant a proportion of the product of our mining districts comes to market in private hands and not, often carefully concealed, so much that does get recorded at the mints and express offices gets counted twice, and so loose and exaggerated are the ideas and estimates of the people of the newer and richer mining-districts, that it is impossible to reach more than an approximation of the truth—with the feeling that this must be generally too high.

But whether our gold and silver crop in 1865 was fifty or seventy five millions, or half way between these figures, we may safely count on its being twenty five millions more this year

Our year's product of a hundred millions in gold and silver will be two-thirds of that of the whole world, or about the same proportion as our cotton crop bears to the grand total of that staple. Austria, Russia, Mexico and South America are good for about fifty millions With such preponderating powers of these great elements of wealth—of the real wealth itself—we have only to fear our own folly or cowardice in the safe and speedy reconstruction of our financial and business systems, in the prompt settlement of our accounts with the world and in our continuous and rapid progress in national power and renown

Wholesale and Jobbing Prices.

PORTLAND, August 24, 1866

Trade since our last has been fair The steamers from San Francisco are bringing full freights. Remittances from the mining region have not been as freeas we might wish but as a general thing, business has a healthy and vigorous aspect. Stocks as a general thing are very full and complete A few articles are in limited supply The demand for coffee is good, no Rons is reported in the market at present The quantity of molasses is also limited and the stock of Island sugar is getting lower especially of medium grades—and although quotations are a shade lower than last reported, the market has ex[illegible] ted more firmness within the past week and prices are slightly tending upward We hook for continued improvement. Domestic Produce Market.

PORTLAND Aug st 24 1866

We learn from retail dealers in Clarity that Walla Walla, Grand Ronde and Lancaster valleys will supply Idaho with flour the coming year Crops are reported large—grain excellent—wheat selling at 60c per bushel, (16 per lb) Such being the case, our flour is cheaper than the quotations and we must direct our attention to some oil or market

Prices for wheat in this market range from 60 to 65 cts per bushel but we hear of no offerings of importance Oats are selling at from 50 to 60 cts. Small quantities only are brought in We learn that [illegible] ds for the Government contract lately advertised were much less than [illegible] delivered will out sacks in the granary at Vancouver

Eggs are in fair demand at 30 to [illegible] per doz Butter is in more demand at an advance of 1 to 2 cts per ₱ lb for sales, on former quotations The stock is light—a large quantity having been bought and taken off the market for speculative purposes There is also a better feeling in home—but the supply continues abundant

Weekly Retail Family Market.

PORTLAND August 24, 1866

The market is better supplied with Oregon grown vegetables fruit, etc., than at any former period the present but at the same time, dealers who pay the city a license for the privilege of transacting business, are doing less than heretofore in consequence of the producer acting both in the capacity of farm and retail merchants.

We learn of nothing having been done towards the establishment of a City Market Place, and we presume, that until some such action is taken as will secure to all parties benefit alike citizens farmers, and dealers, will necessarily be compelled to put up with the practices at present in vogue, of "changing one another" the method being simply nothing more or less than that throughout the rulings of traffic bear as fleeting in the city so far as domestic produce for home use is concerned. The producer cheats the citizen, citizen cheats the dealer and dealers attempt to cheat both producer and citizen! So it goes, and so it must go until the Common Council take hold of the matter, and conclude to regulate this trade properly in the city

Cotton Goods and Woolen Market.

PORTLAND, August 24, 1866

We [illegible] that the Southern papers are advocating the establishment of cotton factories throughout the cotton growing districts in the South The natural facilities there in the way of water power, etc, are not surpassed elsewhere; and among the advantages to be secured by local factories would be the saving of the heavy shipping and insurance charges now incurred in sending the cotton North to be there manufactured and sent back to them in goods and the employment that the factories would afford to youths and others in the South both black and white, who are incompetent for field labor Secondly a burning sun would be an important item The real cause of the Southern States being so far "behind the times" previous to the rebellion, may be summed up in the fact that they exported so little of manufactured goods. England only maintains her position from the fact that she exports so little raw material.

The extraordinary making in Oregon, on account of her manufactures, is a sure indication of her future prosperity We have now in this State four woolen manufacturing companies with a combined capital employed of about $1,500,000 These Factories are now turning out daily 2,650 yards of woolen and cotton goods employing 200 operatives, and consuming annually 1,130,000 pounds of wool.

The Pioneer Cotton Manufacturing enterprise of Oakland, California, by a former citizen of Oregon, is thus far a decided success It is being supplied with raw material grown in the Southern States as well as California grown cotton and the product of the Sandwich Islands, Mexico, and Southern Utah The Bulletin of August 16th, says

The steamer Shoshone which arrived to day brought about 1,000 pounds of upland cotton which has been purchased in New York for the Oakland factory. This cotton we learn is of a grade especially suitable for making flour sacks and with the addition of three cents per pound freight, can be laid down at a less price than California cotton is now held at. By the Comet, which arrived on Monday from Honolulu, two bales finer grown upland cotton of fine quality was received The duty of three cents per pound will probably deter shippers from sending to this port any large quantity of superior quality until mills to manufacture into a finer class of goods are erected At present the Liverpool market for cotton offers greater inducements to foreign shippers than California Parties well informed on the subject, state that there are probably 1,500 acres of cotton being grown this season in California. Cotton growers in this State as a class are very reticent as to their operations, and the estimate made above is a speculative one

Our market for woolen and cotton goods is active, prices remain unchanged in most respects We quote
